Building To Be Started in September

Groundbreaking for the new office, classroom and laboratory building has been tentatively scheduled for September 1978. The scheduled completion date is September 1979. The project calls for construction of 56,599 gross square feet at a cost of $2,531,692 dollars, based on July 1977 construction costs. The building will be located south of the existing Zoellner, Tumpes, and Haud of Boulder are the architectural consultants. Petry-CYM of Denver are the contractors.

The objectives of the plan are to organize separated departments into one unit and to supply needed space, based on the projected growth rate of fall FTE student enrollment. By 1982, an average annual rate of 10%, the student FTE enrollment will be 3,810. The building is expected to meet the required demands of this continued growth.

The building will house faculty offices, and classrooms and laboratories for the chemistry, biology and psychology departments. The three departments were selected to be housed in the new building because of the long standing need for more space and better facilities. The psychology department, which is presently scattered throughout the campus in Cramger Manor and South Halls, will be totally integrated in the new building.

In accordance with the architectural character of UCCS, the structure will resemble the library/classroom building. For increased energy efficiency, however, the plan calls for a passive solar system. A passive solar system is one in which active solar collectors are not used. Everything from windows, ventilation and the shape and volume of the building will be designed to maximize efficiency. The cost of the solar system is estimated at 350,000 dol-

Admissions Making Move

Sometime in the future the area currently used as a student lounge on the second floor of Main Hall will become the office of Admissions and Records.

The current plan, instituted by the Master Planning Committee, calls for major remodeling which would improve accessibility for the handicapped students attending UCCS and, hopefully, improve evacuation facilities in case of fire.

Approximately one-half of the student recrers have been stored on the second floor for the past two to three months. The proposed move of Admissions and Records offices would allow for storage of all records in one area. This would benefit students by saving waiting time and would save Admissions and Records staff both time and energy.

For security purposes the Finance office will remain on the first floor of Main Hall. Once the proposed move has been effected the empty Admissions and Records offices may be utilized by the Finance office.

Mr. Randall Koubas, assistant director of Admissions and Records states, "current plan calls for us to move sometime during August. . . realistically it will probably be towards the end of September."

Special Ed Runs A Summer School

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Nearly 97 students are participating in a special summer school program for children with learning or behavioral problems being conducted by the Special Education division of the School of Education at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs (UCCS).

This marks the second year this program has been offered and its reception has been outstanding, according to Dr. Joan M. Fairchild, associate professor of education.

The six-week program is being held at Audubon School, through the cooperation of School District 11 officials, and will conclude on July 21.

Graduate students in the UCCS Special education program, all certified teachers, are earning their special education practical credits by conducting the program, according to Dr. Fairchild.

Appraiser of the innovative program is David Baratelli, principal of a school for emotionally disturbed youth at Fairlawn, N.J. Baratelli is working on his doctorate degree at Fordham University, New York.

As the general election approaches, people become more concerned with their officials and their voice in the government.

A recent survey of UCCS students indicated an increase in the number registered to vote. Of the 45 students polled, 33 are registered.

Those who voted in the last election numbered 25, a little over 50% of those talked to.

When asked whether or not they intend to vote, UCCS students answered with a strong yes. 38 said they were going to vote, 3 responded probably, and 4 answered no.

If those registered do not have a party affiliation (16). The number of those registered as Democrats surpassed the Republicans by one (8).

People can register in the Election Department, Hall 210, through the UCCS Student Handbook. The official positions that candidates are running for in the Colorado Springs area are: U.S. Senator, U.S. Representatives from the 3rd Dist. and the 6th Dist., Governor, Lt. Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Colorado Senators from Dist. 9 and 11, Colorado Representatives from Dist. 16-22, County Commissioner, County Clerk and Recorder, County Treasurer, Assessor, Sheriff, and County Coroner.

200 S. Cascade during regular business hours. It is possible to register either eligible family members residing at your address at the same time.

If you intend to vote in the last general election you will need to register again.

Absentee ballots are available from 90 days preceding the election until the Friday before the election.

The calendar of elections is as follows:

Sept. 12, 1978: Primary Election
Nov. 7, 1978: General Election
May 1, 1979: School Board Election

New Degree in Chemistry

Increasing diversity and specialization in the field of chemistry has prompted the department of chemistry at UCCS to offer a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry. Previously, only a Bachelor of Arts degree was available.

The B.S. will prepare students at a professional level for careers in industry, government agencies, and hospital and private laboratories. Students who were polled indicated a strong interest in the program. A need for greater breadth and depth in the chemistry is another reason cited for offering the degree.

The program is a four year curriculum stressing the fundamentals of chemistry with a 37 credit core of courses required of all degree candidates.

For additional required courses, B.S. candidates have two options. One is professional chemistry which would prepare students for a career in industry or graduate study. The other option is clinical chemistry for students interested in biochemistry and health careers. Practical experience will be required of clinical chemistry students in area hospitals, Memorial, Penrose, and St. Francis hospitals will be participating in the program. This option is offered because there is a growing need for laboratory practitioners with specialization in chemistry to fill the gap between medical technologists and chemists.

The degree proposal has been approved. The program will begin in the 1978 fall semester.

Admissions to UCCS for the fall 1978 term will begin June 28. Applications are now being accepted. For further information, write to Dr. Donald R. Birkeland, chairman of the department.

Since most energy is consumed in large buildings by artificial lighting as much natural light as possible will be brought in. The downward slope to the south will allow for maximum southern exposure for lighting and heat collection.

Solar ventilation plenums will ventilate the building and control temperature.

The structure is intended to be flexible for changes in later years. Classrooms will probably be eliminated to provide more laboratories, and to allow for the adaptation of an active solar system.

Carroll Birkeland, a member of the faculty at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs, was granted tenure by the University Board of Regents at the regular monthly meeting held Thursday.

Birkeland is an assistant professor of psychology in the College of Letters, Arts and Sciences. He joined the UCCS faculty in 1971 as an instructor, and in 1976 was promoted to assistant professor.

Birkeland received his doctoral degree this year from Colorado State University, where he received his master's degree in 1972. His undergraduate degree is from Moorhead State College.

Colorado Springs, CO. — A replica of a regimental flag carried by Spanish forces when they battled British troops during the time of the American Revolution has been presented to the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs (UCCS).

This is believed to be the only replica in the United States of the five replicas in existence, according to Capt. Ignacio Prieto Vasquez, exchange officer of the Royal Spanish Air Force, who made the presentation to UCCS Chancellor Donald Schwartz.

UCCS was chosen as the recipient of the flag because of the great interest the university has demonstrated in Spanish culture through its courses and programs.

According to Prieto, who is returning to Spain after three years as an instructor at the U.S. Air Force Academy. The flag will be included in a permanent exhibit being developed at the UCCS campus, Schwartz said.

The regiment carrying the standard left Cadiz in 1776 for Havana, and three years later enganged British forces in military campaigns in Louisiana, capturing all the forts the British had built on the shores of the Mississippi River.

One battalion later participated in the siege of Mobile and the battles of Baton Rouge, Natchez, and Pensacola. Following those engagements, the battalion returned to Havana, where it remained until 1784. It then returned to Spain.
