Artist Statement:

A home is a place where a person's self grows. My work explores my childhood living in a distant land compared to my life outside the valley. I used to live in an area outside of Aspen called Ashcroft, surrounded by nature. Ever since moving to Fort Collins, the environment has been very different, and I wanted to showcase the two distinct atmospheres of both homes. The use of shadow boxes portrays parts of memories of my life, which are layered with burned images that pull the colored prints out of the box. Pictures taken with a film camera enabled me to use different household items, such as Milo, to manipulate the colors before film development and change the outcome of each image's color composition.
