The orchestra performs Dmitri Shostakovich's Symphony No. 5, which received a half an hour ovation at its premier in 1937. "The significance of the symphony can never be diminished, said conductor Wes Kenney. "There are many ways to look at the meaning of this inspired opus...we can hardly imagine what the enigmatic composer was living through..." Ottorino Respighi's colorful Trittico Botticelliano (1927), and Malcolm Arnold's Trumpet Concerto Op. 125 are also on the program.
