The very soul of an oboe is its reed. It is upon this small carved bit of cane that the musician creates a tone that is hopefully in tune and pleasing to the ear. Each reed has its own unique sound and narrow target zone where small adjustments lead to pronounced changes. In addition to demonstrations of various tones, the program features Daniel Pinkham's piece Reeds for unaccompanied oboe, as well as pieces featuring oboe, English horn and oboe d'amore with pianist Joel Bacon.
