

colorado state university theatre presents two plays by neil labute: bash and Some Girl(s) Directed by Walton Jones

"(bash) is comprised of three unblinking portraits of the complexities of evil in everyday life, exhibiting LaBute's signature raw lyrical intensity. Exhilaratingly grim, thoroughly and, therefore memorably, shocking in the sense that one doesn't normally see such gruesome acts onstage... But in life these things happen every day - just watch the news or read the newspaper."
David Richards, The New York Times

"A transfixing evening."

"The most legitimately provocative and polarizing playwright at work today."
David Amsden, New York Magazine

"[LaBute's] view of modern men and women is unsparing ... [He] is holding up a pitiless mirror to ourselves. We may not like what we see, but we can't deny that – if only in some dark corner of our souls – it is there."
The Washington Post
